Hello Stefan, No, no spellcheck (manual or otherwise) works. To quote Michael above, "Word no longer highlights potential issues, and when I run the spellcheck, even when I KNOW there are misspelled words, spell check completes without prompting me for any problematic words...I verified that "Do not check spelling or grammar" under Language is unchecked (I always do), with the same results.

Easy to Maintain. C# is a statically-typed language, which means your code will be checked for errors before it gets built into an app. Errors will be easier to track down, and since statically-typed languages are also more strict with how you code something, the codebase in general will be more consistent and thus easier to maintain as it grows in size and complexity.
